2018 Symposium Recap
With the support of the Women for OSU Council, I am eager to explore new initiatives such as an educational programming endowment and additional opportunities for our Partners to engage and connect.

Women for OSU has a bright future, and I invite you to continue the journey with us. Thank you for being a leader in women’s philanthropy and for your partnership and support of Women for OSU!

Sincerely,

Robin Byford
Women for OSU Chairwoman, 2018 - 2020

What a phenomenal year 2018 has been for Women for OSU! It’s been a year of milestones and celebration, which culminated on April 5 as more than 500 people came together at Gallagher-Iba Arena to recognize Anne Greenwood as the 2018 Women for OSU Philanthropist of the Year and to award 12 students a total of $53,190 in scholarships. Additionally, during the spring Symposium we announced that Women for OSU, thanks to your generous support, surpassed its goal of raising $1 million for scholarship support for OSU students.

It is an honor to serve as your next Women for OSU Chairwoman, and I couldn’t be more excited to continue its momentum into the next decade. Amy Mitchell, our immediate past Chair, did a tremendous job leading the organization and providing vision for the future.

Under Amy’s leadership we implemented terms within the Council that will ensure we invite new alumnae to join us and help propel us forward. Additionally, a junior membership was created for those 35 and younger, and an initiative is underway to build strong relationships with younger OSU women seeking professional mentorship.

As your incoming Chairwoman, I look forward to carrying the torch and continuing to look for innovative ways to engage with alumnae and friends of OSU.

Thank you to all who helped make the 10th annual Women for OSU Symposium a success! At the event we came together and celebrated women’s giving and the collective influence your philanthropy has on this wonderful university.

Highlights of the event included hearing inspirational stories about our 12 student scholarship recipients (whom you can read more about on pages 10-13) and a heartwarming speech from 2018 Philanthropist of the Year, Anne Greenwood (more on page 6).

This year’s event was especially meaningful as we recognized our 10-year milestone, and we know the next decade will be even more exciting. The Women for OSU Council is dedicated to finding new and innovative ways to engage its audience and extend the reach of the group’s impact.

Be sure to keep your eyes on your inboxes for information from Women for OSU, including sponsorship and ticket information for the 2019 Women for OSU Symposium.
Social psychologist and bestselling author Amy Cuddy is an expert on the behavioral science of power, presence and prejudice. Amy, who teaches leadership at Harvard, earned her PhD from Princeton University and has served on the faculties of Harvard Business School and Northwestern University. Amy’s book, Presence: Bringing Your Boldest Self to Your Biggest Challenges, is a New York Times, Washington Post, USA Today, Wall Street Journal, Publisher’s Weekly, and Globe & Mail bestseller and has been published in 30 languages. As described in the New York Times Sunday Book Review, “Presence feels at once concrete and inspiring, simple but ambitious — above all, truly powerful.” Amy’s 2012 TED Talk, “Your Body Language May Shape Who You Are,” named by The Guardian as “One of 20 Online Talks that Could Change Your Life,” has been viewed more than 46 million times and is the second-most-viewed TED Talk.
Ten years after serving as the inaugural chair of Women for OSU, Stillwater benefactress Anne Greenwood was recognized as the 2018 Philanthropist of the Year.

Greenwood said she’s been proud of Women for OSU in the way the group celebrates philanthropy and impacts students’ lives through scholarships.

“Being able to provide scholarships for OSU students is a cause that is near and dear to my heart,” Greenwood said. “As a young woman growing up in the small town of Carnegie in southwest Oklahoma, it was my dream to be able to attend Oklahoma State University. With a big leap of faith and with the help of scholarships, I landed right here at the Oklahoma State campus.”

Greenwood said Oklahoma State offered her the perfect platform to be successful in school and in life. She studied accounting at OSU for three years before graduating from The University of Tulsa in 1979.

During her time at OSU, she was the Collegiate FFA queen, Drummond Residence Hall officer and was on the Dean’s Honor Roll. After a career in corporate accounting with several Fortune 500 companies, including American Electric Power, Central and South West, McDonnell Douglas and the Williams Companies, Anne retired to focus on philanthropic endeavors.

Over the past 10 years Anne has been incredibly visible on campus as she and her husband, Michael Greenwood, have been doing what they can to ensure other students have similar experiences.

They’ve made headlines with lead gifts to projects like The Michael and Anne Greenwood Tennis Center, The Anne Morris Greenwood Reading Room in Edmon Low Library, the new Spears School of Business building and The McKnight Center for the Performing Arts at Oklahoma State University. Most recently the couple announced a lead gift to name the Michael and Anne Greenwood School of Music.

They have also endowed multiple scholarships across campus and are a constant support to the OSU Marching Band and the Cowboy Strong Student Emergency Fund.

In addition to her involvement in Women for OSU, Anne has served in leadership and volunteer capacities for Friends of the OSU Library, OSU Friends of Music, OSU Athletics Council, College of Human Sciences Freshman Reading Program, OSU Performing Arts Advisory Council and the Provost’s External Advisory Council. She is also a major sponsor of the OSU Student Foundation and the Cowboy Marching Band, which, in addition to financial support, she has provided thousands of snacks over the past decade. She is a member of the OSU Proud & Immortal Society, OSU Foundation Loyal and True Society, OSU Baseline Club, OSU Diamond Club, OSU Wrestling Club and OSU POSSE. She is also a proud member of Tri Delta sorority and serves as treasurer of its Housing Corporation.

“Anne’s passion for OSU reaches every corner of interest, from student success in the classroom and on the court, to recital halls and study rooms at Edmon Low Library,” said Kirk Jewell, president of the OSU Foundation, who adds that Anne is creating a culture of philanthropy at OSU. “She is driven by her desire to share her blessings, inspiring countless others to follow in her footsteps of altruism and loyalty to OSU.”

For Anne, it’s an honor to give to Oklahoma State and use her blessings to bless others.

“Giving back and making a difference is how I’ve come to live my life, and I am proud of it,” she said, adding that she admired everyone at the symposium who has chosen OSU as a focus of their philanthropy. “And I would encourage everyone to never stop supporting our university that has given us all so much.”

Being named Women for OSU’s Philanthropist of the Year is a great honor. Each year, a group of incredible peers, who are all true philanthropists themselves, recognize one woman among the impressive OSU family who is living an exceptionally beautiful life of service to others.

To symbolize this honor, at this year’s Symposium each past and current Philanthropist of the Year was presented with a custom-made, hand-blown artistic glass vase from Bella Forte Glass Studio in Oklahoma City. Artist Chris McGahan calls these vases Redento Raffinato, which means "redeemed elegance." He and his son, Micah, save small pieces of glass from various projects to create these one-of-a-kind vases. The materials of various shapes, sizes and colors blend together to give life to these beautiful works of art.

In the same way, the Women for OSU Philanthropists of the Year combine their various passions for good. They use their passions to change lives and make the world better. Our Philanthropists of the Year are honored for their collective impact. They have spent decades recognizing and seizing opportunities to help others.

“We watch and admire how the Women for OSU Philanthropists of the Year utilize their time, talent and treasure to spark change,” said Michal Shaw, director of Women for OSU. “We see the remarkable ways they make a difference in the lives of so many others, and we are in awe of the colors and beauty their passion creates in the world around them. Recognizing them is truly an honor for us.”

Thank you to our first 10 Women for OSU Philanthropists of the Year for everything you have done and continue to do.

Cardin Hart
JUNIOR | CHEMICAL ENGINEERING | EDMOND, OK

ORANGE PASSION: Music & Healthcare

Mentorship has played a significant role in Cardin Hart’s philanthropic journey. Starting in high school, Cardin said he was blessed with mentors who encouraged him to serve in various capacities. This influence is evident through his philanthropy on and off campus. Some of these philanthropic activities include United We Send, Helping Hands and Meal Plans, and Stamp Out Starvation.

Cardin found his professional calling serving at Manos Juntos, a free medical clinic. He enjoys serving people who don’t have access to healthcare because he feels like he makes a difference. He plans to attend medical school upon graduation to continue his service in the medical field. A member of Pokeapella, OSU’s acapella group, Cardin is also passionate about music. He uses this and other musical activities to channel his creativity, be a mentor, and continue his service to others.

Jacquelyn Crawford
SOPHOMORE | APPLIED TECHNOLOGY, HORTICULTURE | JONES, OK

ORANGE PASSION: Conservation & Education

Jacquelyn Crawford has a strong passion for animals and the environment. Her heart, for wildlife especially, shows in her amount of service at the Oklahoma City Zoo. In addition to serving as a zoo keeper, Jacquelyn is entrusted with a variety of responsibilities including educating younger students about the importance of wildlife conservation.

Jacquelyn’s involvement in her high school’s FFA influenced her work with animals and education. She started volunteering at the Zoo when she was 14 and hasn’t looked back. She understands the importance of education and mentoring, and applies what she learned to her work with the Boys and Girls Club.

Jacquelyn gets excited about conserving the world and wants to share her passion with others. She plans to pursue a doctoral degree and continue in conservation.

Lacy Brame
2ND YEAR | OSTEOPATHIC MEDICINE | NORMAN, OK

ORANGE PASSION: Community & Rural Healthcare in Oklahoma

Lacy Brame’s strong desire to address health disparities and serve underserved families as a physician stems from her research and observations of health issues in Oklahoma. Her graduate research focused heavily on the negative implications of tobacco usage, specifically in American Indians. She cares deeply about reducing chronic disease and tobacco usage across the state. After receiving her master’s degree in epidemiology, Lacy decided to go to medical school at OSU so she could not only continue her tobacco research but also serve disparate populations in Oklahoma by treating the diseases and health disparities impacted by her research.

She has been published in numerous scientific journals and won awards for her research at the state level. In addition, she has volunteered routinely at Crossings Community Clinic in Oklahoma City. She enjoys seeing the impact she and other volunteers have on families who visit the clinic. Lacy is eager to enter a career in which she can serve people with limited access to healthcare, ensuring philanthropy continues to be a part of her everyday life.

Jasmyn Lee
JUNIOR | CIVIL ENGINEERING | LAWTON, OK

ORANGE PASSION: Diversity & Mentorship

Legacy is a motivating factor for Jasmyn Lee. Whether through her career or service to others, she wants to leave the world a better place. This pay-it-forward mentality has lead the Lawton junior to pursue a Civil Engineering degree so she can directly influence her environment. Jasmyn learned her determination and sense of service from her mother and grandmother, who taught her that philanthropy is a core characteristic rather than a body of good work.

Jasmyn strives to be a role model through her positions in CEAT, residential life, and in her church. As a mentor on campus, she recognizes the opportunity to listen and help younger students in their journeys.

In her experiences, she has seen the need for diversity and equality in the workforce and desires to remedy this for women. Jasmyn says serving in this capacity is the best way she can make a lasting difference.

Natalie Keirns
DOCTORAL STUDENT | PSYCHOLOGY | HAYSVILLE, KS

ORANGE PASSION: Community Health & Mentoring

Natalie Keirns’ philanthropy and research is centered around her interest and desire to help people live their best lives. She looks at the intersection of physical and mental health and the ways this impacts individuals emotionally and socially.

Natalie’s journey of volunteerism began when she saw a newspaper ad looking for part-time assistance for a disabled mother and son. They needed help with everyday tasks, including laundry and cooking. Since then, Natalie has built a strong relationship with the family and continues to volunteer her time helping them. Inspired by this family, Natalie continues to find opportunities to serve others in different capacities, many times through mentorship.

Investing her time as a role model and mentor is something Natalie sees as truly adding value to the lives of those she serves. She has learned a great deal from her mentors. Their influence and sacrificial love flow into her time spent with the young women in YoungLife and undergraduate psychology students who Natalie mentors. She strives to help others meet their goals and provides them with encouragement along the way.

Pratishtha Poudel
DOCTORAL STUDENT | CROP SCIENCE | BHARATPUR, NEPAL

ORANGE PASSION: International Wheat Production

Pratishtha Poudel has a genuine concern for others and seeks to find many ways to serve. Her passion for wheat research is fueled by the benefits to farmers both here in Oklahoma and in her home country of Nepal. She emphasizes the importance of listening to the true needs of those she’s been able to help.

She utilizes her past experiences in her current role as the president of the Nepalese Student Association. She helped with a large fundraising campaign for relief following the damaging Nepal earthquake in 2015. In order to raise funds, the Association sold shirts, created an online giving campaign and planned a silent auction.

Pratishtha is highly inspired by the rights of women and the influence they have around the world. She plans to continue her philanthropy beyond graduation, encouraging and leading other women around the world to serve their communities.

Erin Wood believes people are put on the earth to do good for others. She has the heart to help those around her, giving freely of her time and believing her small actions will yield great results.

On almost any given weekend you can find Erin serving food from an OSU concession stand raising money for fellow graduate students or in her church's fellowship hall serving meals to undergraduate parishioners. Erin also works nearly 50 hours a week in research labs and as an instructor of Introductory Psychology. She intentionally mentors the younger students who work with her. She often reads personal statements and resumes and helps students find ways to become more academically competitive.

Erin wants to pursue a career teaching at the college level where she will be able to solve real-world problems by way of research and mentorships through her relationships with students. She also aspires to someday be a foster parent.

Sarah Oliver JUNIOR | BIOCHEMISTRY, PRE-LAW FOCUS | ARDMORE, OK

Whether it’s been collecting canned food, learning to knit or traveling abroad to study other cultures, philanthropy has brought with it a sense of community for Ardmore junior Sarah Oliver.

Sarah has served in various leadership positions at Stout Hall, the Honors College Living and Learning Community, including the philanthropy chair. She is currently the hall’s president. As a freshman, she started a program that redirects leftover meal plan money to the purchase of canned goods for an area food bank. That program continues today, and Sarah is hopeful to inspire and encourage underclassmen new to Stout Hall to discover their passions and look for ways to make a difference.

Sarah defines philanthropy as doing whatever you can with whatever you have for the betterment of society. She plans to graduate in May 2019 with a bachelor of science degree in biochemistry. She wants to pursue a law degree and Sarah defi nes philanthropy as doing whatever you can with whatever you have for the betterment of society. Lourdes FelixCuret SOPHOMORE | LIBERAL STUDIES | OKLAHOMA CITY, OK

After Hurricane Maria slammed Puerto Rico, Lourdes FelixCuret flew to San Juan where her family lives. She sent an email looking for ways to get involved and stumbled upon her passion for helping others. She collected generators and oxygen concentrators and delivered them to families in San Juan.

Lourdes, a single mother of a disabled teenager, says life is about staying positive and doing the best you can in every situation. Aneysha Nayaska, Lourdes’ 15 year-old daughter, is the driving force behind her passions. Nonverbal and immobile without assistance, Aneysha relies on her mother to advocate for her. Lourdes wants to pursue a Juris Doctorate to serve families in the nonprofit sector.

Lourdes is working to get a 501c3 certification for an organization she started that connects such families with a variety of quality-of-life resources. Her ultimate goal is to create a more inclusive world that embraces all members of the community.

Ashley Knoch DOCTORAL STUDENT | INTEGRATIVE BIOLOGY | NEW KENSINGTON, PA

Ph.D. candidate Ashley Knoch is at home among nature. Her research in integrative biology focuses on bee communities and land-management practices that keep them safe. But as much as she loves the research, Knoch says she makes the biggest impact by inspiring people to get outdoors. Ashley enjoys helping others discover wildlife and encouraging a sense of wonder. She hopes people are able to build a greater understanding of the world around them, overcome fears about wildlife and grow a deeper respect for all living things.

As a volunteer at OSU’s Insect Adventure, Ashley especially enjoys showing middle school girls that science is cool. She also mentors female researchers that are both her colleagues and students in courses she oversees as a graduate teaching assistant. Ashley is passionate about OSU’s land-grant mission and wants to pursue a career in research and Extension.
Women for Oklahoma State University, like many programs, has experienced its share of reinvention and revival over the past 10 years. But what has remained constant is our mission — to foster a culture of giving and service that acknowledges the significant impact women have at OSU and to inspire others to positively shape the future of the university through philanthropy and engagement.

Women for OSU’s annual Symposium has been central to the way we carry out our mission. It is a unique opportunity for leaders to gather in Stillwater and be inspired by philanthropists and student leaders, sharing personal stories of their philanthropic journeys.

Since the first Symposium in 2009, the organization has surpassed 3,000 total attendees at its events, including Symposiums and regional gatherings.

Because of you and others who have invested in the Women for OSU Endowed Scholarship, we have awarded more than $200,000 to 61 students (2018 scholars included).

At this year’s event, we announced that Women for OSU surpassed its audacious goal to grow the scholarship endowment to $1 million. Together we have ensured the legacy of this organization will continue in big and meaningful ways to future philanthropists, dreamers and doers.

While it is right for us to take a moment and celebrate all that has been done over the past 10 years, we are keeping our focus on the future and what we can achieve together. We are looking forward to identifying new and innovative ways to continue engaging Women for OSU and celebrating our collective power of giving.

Five Reasons you should become a Women for OSU Partner

Becoming a Women for OSU Partner is a great opportunity to get involved with the group and help support scholarships and programs while connecting with other women passionate about the university. Here are five reasons you should become a Women for OSU Partner.

1. You’ll experience the power of women giving for a collective purpose
2. Your support will directly impact extraordinary students who are serving their communities
3. You’ll connect with like-minded women committed to philanthropy
4. You’ll be recognized and appreciated year-round online and at Women for OSU events
5. Your generosity and leadership will inspire others to give back to OSU

You can become a Women for OSU Partner today with a minimum contribution of $1,000 annually to the Women for OSU Scholarship Fund. For those 35 and younger, the minimum annual contribution is $500.

Women for OSU Council

For Women for OSU, the collective focus and attention is on unity — how together the Council can benefit Oklahoma State and inspire leadership and philanthropy in countless other communities. Today, women view philanthropy not so much as “giving” but as “investing” — investing in change, investing in the future and investing in causes that are personally meaningful.

Those who serve on the Women for OSU Council volunteer their time and treasure to propel the impact of the organization forward. Below is the list of Council members as of June 30, 2018. Thank you for your service!
